Bulletins

Lakehurst, N. J., May 7 (AP)—Three more bodies were taken from the ruins of the Hindenburg today. They were among those listed previously as missing and were not immediately identified.

Asbury Park, N. J., May 7 (AP)—An unidentified man, badly burned in the explosion of the Hindenburg, died today in Fitkin Memorial Hospital. It was not known whether he was a passenger or member of the crew. His death was the second today.

THE WEATHER

Overcast, with slight change in temperature, tonight and Saturday; possibly a light shower early tonight; gentle to moderate northerly or northeasterly winds.

ZEP SABOTAGE PROBE ON

(Other News and Pictures of Hinderburg disaster on Pages 2—3—4—5—10—11—12—13—14)

BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Lakehurst, N. J., May 7—The flaming destruction of the dirigible Hindenburg brought swift action today by the American and German governments to determine the cause of the disaster. (There were hints of sabotage—that an incendiary bullet may have been fired into the hydrogen-filled ship.)

Thirty persons were known dead or missing.

Of the 97 passengers and members of the crew aboard when the greatest of all airships exploded, burst into flames and crashed to earth last night—just as it was lowering to the mooring mast, and only 200 feet above the ground—68 persons survived. One of those killed was a spectator, burned to death in the flaming debris.

The ruins of the luxurious sky liner lay crumpled on the landing field at the Naval Air Station—a junk heap of black metal.

'SABOTAGE!' CRY AS HINDENBURG TOLL IS FIXED AT 30

U. S. PROBES DISASTER; SOME SURVIVORS DYING

Smoking on the Hindenburg was allowed only in a spark-proof compartment.

Commander Charles E. Rosendahl, commandant at the naval station, said the fire originated at or near the stern of the ship about 5:25 p. m. (E.D.S.T.).

In his report to the Navy Department, the commandant, a veteran in lighter-than-air craft service, said:

"About 4 minutes after the ropes had been dropped a fire appeared in the after part of the ship and worked progressively forward. The ship settled to the ground tail first and was practically completely ablaze for her entire length by the time the ground was reached."

Naval Inquiry Is Planned; Hangar Becomes Morgue

Fred D. Fagg, director of the federal bureau of air commerce, was on hand preparing for the government's inquiry.

A naval inquiry was regarded as a certainty, since the dirigibe crashed on a naval reservation.

On the lips of everyone was the question—What caused the crash, what was the matter? Twenty times had the Hindenburg crossed the north Atlantic safely.

As Washington officials and Dr. Hans Luther, the German ambassador, opened inquiries, three possible causes—all, however, relating to the highly-inflammable hydrogen used in the German Zeppelins—were outlined by the ship's designer and pilot on numerous voyages, Dr. Hugo Eckener.

Burning Bullet Theory Advanced by Eckener

"I should say that if this disaster was caused by sabotage," said Dr. Eckener, who was in Austria on a speaking trip, "only the firing of a burning bullet into the bag . . . could have accomplished it. That seems highly unlikely."

"From this distance and on the basis of incomplete information," Dr. Eckener set forth these possibilities:

"1—Uhen the ship is lowered, some hydrogen usually is released. This free hydrogen in the air might have been sufficiently concentrated to be ignited by lightning or a spark.

2—When landing, the water ballast is released from the tanks. A stream of water, connecting with the earth, might have served as an electrical conductor to bring up a spark from the ground.

"3—Someone aboard may have made a fire, a spark possibly from a cigarette lighter. I regard this also as unlikely, for the conduct of passengers and crew is watched carefully."

The identification of dead was difficult. The ship's manifest was destroyed in the holocaust. Zeppelin officials were in frequent communication with Germany, checking last minute changes in the passenger lists.

Reservations had been made for 75 persons, but company officials said only 36 of these were aboard, and 61 members of the crew.

All bodies recovered from the twisted, fire-warped skeleton were taken to an improvised morgue in the hangar which was closely guarded. All but officials of the line and navy officers were barred.

INSURED FOR $2,500,000

With the entire naval reservation closed to everyone except officials and newspapermen, United States troops guarded the area strewn ruins of the airship—the first of the Zeppelins to carry a commercial passenger to death.

Insurance authorities in London said the ship was insured for $2,500,000, with $2,000,000 held by Lloyds underwriters and the rest by German interests.

With Dr. Eckener saying sabotage could not be entirely eliminated as a possible cause, Senator Copeland, chairman of the committee on commerce, said one of the purposes of the government's inquiry would be to determine if sabotage caused the disaster.

"There are two things that I want to know," he told reporters in Washington.

SOME LIVE IN INFERNO

"I want to know if there was any sabotage connected with the disaster, and I want to know the type of material connected with the interior construction of the dirigible."

Many of the survivors—some of whom jumped from the liner as it fell to earth, others who were catapulted to safety in the impact, and even some who staggered out of the inferno alive—were in dangerous condition in hospitals near the air station.

Captain Max Pruss, who was commanding the Hindenburg on the first time, was one of those in a critical condition.

Captain Ernst A. Lehmann, whom Pruss succeeded and who was on the ship in an advisory capacity, also was in a very serious condition.

Scores of spectators witnessed the sudden, shocking tragedy. One instant, they waved greetings up to passengers standing in the windows of the observation compartment.

BODIES BLOWN OUT

Then, in a flash, a cannonading explosion jarred the huge cigar-shaped craft, a streak of flame lashed out, and the Hindenburg plummeted clumsily to earth.

Tiny black objects—bodies—hurtled from the flaming craft. On the ground, women spectators screamed and covered their eyes in horror.

Today, a few hundred yards from the blackened tangle of wreckage, the dead lay row on row in the oil-stained garage that was hastily transformed into a temporary morgue.

The stories of the tragedy were all the same.

"A blinding flash," said Herbert O'Laughlin, of Chicago, a survivor.

"A noise that sounded like bullets coming out of the gondolas," said Robert Seelig, a photographer on the ground. "I saw the ship just sink down and the flames go through it."

4TH U. S. TRAGEDY

The disaster, writing a fiery finis to the Hindenburg's 135,000 miles of safe transit across the Atlantic, was the first major wreck to involve a lighter-than-air ship carrying paying passengers.

All other crashes, in the 78 years since Count Zeppelin began the use of dirigibles, involved military or naval craft.

It was America's fourth major tragedy of its kind, the other three being the naval dirigible Shenandoah, which broke in two during a storm over Ohio, September 2, 1925, with a death toll of 14; the destruction of the Akron off Barnegat Inlet, April 4, 1933, with 73 killed, and the plunge of the Macon into the sea, off the California coast, early in 1935.

Storms and baffling headwinds had delayed the slim, graceful ship far behind her schedule for the hidden hour, and she nosed down in the early evening to keep the unexpected rendezvous with disaster.

She had come majestically up to the mooring mast at 5 a. m. (E. S. T.), but radioed last night that the bad weather had retarded her speed so much that she would land around sunset.

LANDING CREW WAITS

After cruising down over New York's crowed streets in the afternoon, she drove into sight at the air station here at 3:12 p. m., but landing conditions were not favorable and she circled around idly in full view of the small crowd of spectators who had assembled for what was to be a routine hurry-up arrival and departure.

A rain storm came up and whipped across the field and Capt. Pruss decided to ride it out to make sure of most favorable landing conditions.

Rain was still falling lightly when she headed into the mooring circle shortly after 6 o'clock, nosing down gracefully and with the nice precision that had marked so many of her arrivals last year.

The ground crew of sailors, soldiers and marines moved out onto the field to handle her landing ropes. Lower she nosed, her Diesel motors throttled down. Passengers, gaily waving at the crowd, lined the long lounge windows which show like transparent slits in the great silver belly of the ship.

The spider-like web of landing ropes snaked down the little trap doors in nthe nose. Men of the ground crew grabbed them at the wooden crossbars.

It was 6:23.

HAVOC WITH A BOOM

Then came the terrific explosion, and brilliant red flames suddenly splashed out toward the tern and the rudder that bore the red-and-black Nazi Swastika. The detonation tore the ship in half as if it were made of paper. The tail dropped earthward. The blunt nose bobbed up, hung a moment in his air and then crumpled toward the field, flames running along its sides and its fabric flaking off in big chunks.

Passengers and men of the crew were hurled through the silvered walls of the Hindenburg to the sandy loam below. The crowd receded in a panick surge to the shouts of "run for your lives." Navy men dashed into the flaming debris to make rescues.

Collapsing in a tangled mass of girders and aluminum beams, the ship was torn by a series of additional explosions, lesser in force than the first shattering blast. And the flames roared up in a red and yellow wall to envelope the ship that had seemed so durable and safe a few short minutes before.

The flames burned well into the night, despite the efforts of fire departments to quench them.

STREAM OF AMBULANCES

Night came down. A steady stream of ambulances carried away the injured. Badly burned bodies were gathered in a hastily improvised morgue and the grim task of identification begun.

As this went on passengers for the homeward trip of the Hindenburg, unaware of the destruction which had overtaken the ship, were arriving to embark. Many planned to attend the coronation and the Hindenburg represented the fastest way of getting there if one left at the last minute.

Stunned, they saw the burning wreckage.

Hours after the first terrific explosion, the ship was still licked by flames and its red-hot rings and girders glowed in the dark.

An explosion of the No. 2 gas cell toward the stern of the ship was named as the cause of the disaster by State Aviation Commissioner Gill Robb Wilson, who called the blast "strange." The highly-inflammable hydrogen gas billowed into fieree flame as the explosion plummeted the ship to the airfield. Ground spectators said crew members in the stern of the ship "never had a chance" to escape.

The passengers, who were waving gaily a minute before, from the observation windows that slit the belly of the dirigible, were so stunned they could not describe later what happened. Some jumped to the sandy landing field along with members of the crew. Others seemed to have been pitched from the careening sky liner as it made its death plunge.

The heat drove back would-be rescuers, so it could not be determined for how many the Hindenburg made a burning tomb. Fire departments from nearby communities converged on the field and soon had streams of water playing on the broken airliner. The flames still enveloped the outline of the ship, apparently feeding on the fuel oil supply which the Hindenburg carried for her Diesel motors.

CITES TWO CAUSES

Somewhere in the glowing furnace were the two dogs, 340 pounds of mail and the ton of baggage which she had aboard.

F. W. Von Meister, vice-president of the American Zeppelin Transport Co., the general U. S. agents for the German Zeppelin Transport Co., the Hindenburg's owners, said there were two possible causes for the explosion.

First he listed the rainy condition which prevailed at the naval air station when the landing was attempted. The ship cruised around over the field for an hour to ride a rainstorm and nosed down while rain was still falling.

The rainy condition, Von Meister said, would make for the creation of a spark of static electricity when the landing ropes were dropped and such a spark might have touched off the highly explosive hydrogen gas which gave the long silver ship its lifting power.

SPARK FROM ENGINE

The second theory Von Meister advanced was that a spark flew from one of the engines when they were throttled down for the landing. The ship had been valving hydrogen preparatory to landing, and he theorized some of the gas might have gathered in a pocket under the tail surfaces and detonated when the spark flew back.

Some authorities scouted the theory that the explosion could have been caused by the ignition of hydrogen inside the gas cells. They said a mixture of 20 per cent free air with hydrogen would be necessary to cause an explosion, indicating the first blast must have occurred outside one of the gas cells.

Aeronautical experts said the only way they could explain an explosion inside the ship would be that free hydrogen had in some way escaped and was lying in the stern where it was accidentally ignited.

The ship was 75 hours and 23 minutes out of Frankfort-on-Main, her home port, when the disaster occurred.

FLAMES SHOOT HIGH

The first two blasts sent flames shooting high into the evening sky, but men standing under the ship reported they felt virtually no concussion. The explosion's force, however, was felt a little farther away from the ship, those in the ring of spectators said.

Captain Ernst Lehmann, who piloted the ship on most of its trips a year ago, tottered dazedly from the wreckage and staggered toward an ambulance.

VICTIMS HURLED OUT

The force of the explosion hurled some passengers from the fabric envelope of the ship as it fell and threw them stunned on the landing field.

Wilson repeated he considered the explosion's cause unexplained and added:

"I repeat there was something strange that caused this tragedy."

"Those in the belly of the ship," he said, "absolutely had no chance."

The tail with its swastika emblems of Nazi Germany sagged downward immediately after the first rending explosion. The nose hung motionless for a moment in the air, then crashed earthward, the split sections telescoped as they fell, and pieces of the silvery fabric fluttered down, some in flames.

Screams and cries of injured in a sky were "terrible," the sailors and marines who did rescue work reported. The clothing was completely burned off one man. Another, blown through the envelope, was found moaning near the smashed airship.

Some of the spectators and ground crew men said they saw figures, apparently members of the crew, leap from the control car as it neared the ground. When the stern settled it yielded badly burned bodies, for here the fire was the worst at first.

Even after the first stunning explosion sent the ship crashing, additional blasts continued to rend the Hindenburg's silvery hulk. Spectators sobbed hysterically at the abrupt disaster in which the Hindenburg had ended her maiden 1937 trip to America. Eighteen trips had been planned this year.

HUNT MORE BODIES

Herbert M. Le Compte, of nearby Lakewood, who gave first aid treatment to some of the survivors, said none of them was able to tell what caused the explosion.

A half-dozen volunteer fire-departments poured streams of water on the flames, while rescue workers waited patiently until they could be brought under control and the wreckage made safe for a search for bodies.

The Hindenburg, which had put out from her home base, Frankfort-on-Main, Germany, 75 hours before, had cruised majestically over Boston and New England and the skyscrapers of New York and headed to Lakehurst for an evening landing. Aboard were 39 passengers and a crew of 61.

Because of the strong winds that swept the broad plain during the day, the ship always had landed at dusk or at dawn. Headwinds met on its voyage prevented the anticipated 6 a. m. landing.

The big ship was sighted at Lakehurst soon after 3 o'clock, but hovered over the pines, looking much like a big cigar, awaiting favorable landing conditions and the clearing of a light rain and electrical storm.

The motors droned as she approached the mast. Two nose lines were dropped through trap doors. The lines were attached and the huge silver bag gleamed despite fast-falling darkness. A light rain was still falling.

Lights gleamed from the gondolas.

Then came a crackling roar, and the few hundred spectators—a mere handful compared to the thousands who watched the Hindenburg end her maiden North Atlantic flight a year ago this month—gasped.

The detonation tore the ship in half. She burned as she crumpled. By the time she settled the 200 feet to earth she was a blazing tomb.

THE AGONY OF IT

At first it was feared that all aboard had perished.

Then a steward and two cabin boys appeared out of the wreckage, stunned.

Rescuers took heart. Perhaps there was hope for more.

A man crawled out of a gondola, his clothes burned off, his body seared. A woman leaped from a window. More came stumbling out.

The ground crew found the dead, as well as the living.

It was the job of the first watch, as E. Z. Matthews, first-class machinist's mate, related, "to haul the dead ones out of the wreck."

"Have you ever seen a guy burned so badly that he shouldn't be killing, but he does?" he said. "We found a sailor who knew if there were any burnt clothes on him he would be stripped, taking his flesh with them, so he had taken off everything except his underclothing.

"We saw him wandering around all black from the hands to the elbows and from the feet to the knees, with the skin walked. He had no more than an inch of skin all over him."

All evening long reports of the number of dead varied. It went down to 73, then 50, and then dropped by ones and twos as persons listed as missing were found in nearby hospitals.

Early today it was discovered that at least one spectator was among the dead.

FLAMES ROAR HIGH AS SHATTERED ZEP CRASHES

A few short minutes ago, the giant Hindenburg was proudly riding the skies. Now she's crashing down, a shattered hulk, manned by dead and dying, and the hungry flames, fed by explosive hydrogen gas, have her as their helpless prey.

This extraordinary camera shot shows how tremendously the blast blazed up, causing horror-strickn members of the mooring crew to cower on their mast. You can see their shrinking figures, black against the incandescence of the explosion.

Note how the fire is already breaking through the dirigible's nose. The Hindenburg's whole interior is a furnace. Only marvel to observers was how any man or woman aboard the sky liner could survive.

ECKENER HEADS FOR U. S.; REVEALS ZEP WARNINGS

Vienna, May 7 (AP)—Dr. Hugo Eckener said today the possibility of sabotage must be considered in investigation of the disaster to the Hindenburg which he designed, but that he considered such explanation most unlikely.

"Mind, I did not say sabotage was responsible but that it must be considered as a possibility, especially in view of many threatening letters received by our firm," he asserted upon his arrival from Graz, Austria.

"In this unhappy moment, I find some comfort in the thought that a natural and explainable cause brought about destruction of the ship to which I contributed a life time of study, work and love."

ON WAY TO U. S.

He had regained his composure after first news of the destruction at Lakehurst, and changed from sport clothes to business suit before taking the regular plane to Berlin.

He hoped to catch the liner Europa for the United States with a German investigating commission.

Dr. Eckener, who wept when he first heard of the disaster to "Our Pride," declared he would insist to the utmost of his power that "this must be an end to the use of hydrogen—we must use helium."

As for the chances of sabotage, he said:

"I should say that if this disaster was caused by sabotage, only the firing of a burning bullet into the bags from a distance could have accomplished it. That seems highly unlikely."

He outlined three other possible causes of the explosion "from this distance and on the basis of incomplete information:"

THREE OTHER THEORIES

"1—When the ship is lowered some hydrogen usually is released. This free hydrogen in the air might have been sufficiently concentrated to be ignited by lightning or a spark. It would not necessarily have to be a great flash of lightning; perhaps it wasn't seen by the observers.

"2—When landing, the water ballast is released from the tanks. A stream of water, connecting with the earth, might have served as an electrical conductor to bring a spark up from the ground. It is possible an electric charge, so to speak, stabbed the Hindenburg from the earth.

"3—Soneone aboard may have made a fire; a spark, possibly from a cigarette lighter. I regard this also as unlikely, for the conduct of the passengers and crew is watched carefully."

MUST USE HELIUM

Dr. Eckener was obviously shaken, but maintained his characteristic soldierly bearing.

"I am a very unhappy man," he said.

Then he added:

"This must be an end to the use of hydrogen to lift airships!

"I might point out that sabotaging helium-filled ships is much more difficult."

"We have received several anonymous warnings of possible efforts to damage the ship," the doctor added. "One mysterious warning told us not to attempt landing in America. Every precaution was taken but the only rational conclusion was that the veiled threat came from cranks."

Hurley, Cole Grieve Over Hindenburg

Shocked by the news of the Hindenburg tragedy, Governor Hurley said:

"It was terrible to learn of the destruction of the Hindenburg and of the lives lost aboard her. I sympathize most deeply with the families of the victims and with the people whose patience and persistence have gone so far in developing the science of lighter-than-air travel."

General Charles H. Cole, the adjutant-general, who was with the Governor when news of the tragedy reached him said:

"It's a terrible thing."

BERLIN DOUBTS SABOTAGE; CITES NEED FOR HELIUM

By WALTER DIETZEL

Copyright, 1937, by International News Service

Berlin, May 7—Theories that sabotage may have been responsible for the disastrous crash of the giant dirigible Hindenburg at Lakehurst were discredited by the Reich propaganda ministry as officials prepared to launch a searching investigation of the disaster.

It was announced an official commission to investigate the crash would sail aboard the liner Europa from Cherbourg, France.

Some members of the commission, which will include Dr. Hugo Eckener, famed airship commander and chief of the Zeppelin company, spent the entire night studying reports of the disaster cabled from Lakehurst.

An official of the propaganda ministry told International News Service:

"I cannot believe sabotage was responsible, but am unable to express a definite opinion pending arrival of the commission."

HYDROGEN BLAMED

It was understood the commission was chosen to make the probe at the express wishes of Chancellor Hitler and Air Minister Hermann Wilhelm Goering.

Air ministry experts, meanwhile, attributed the explosions and fire which sent the Hindenburg crashing to earth in a flaming holocaust to the inflammability of the hydrogen carried within its giant hull.

A spokesman for the air ministry said:

"It is a pity the ship was not filled with helium."

But officials of the Zeppelin Company here quickly repudiated allegations that the United States had withheld helium from Germany. The United States holds a monopoly on this product, which is far safer than hydrogen because it is much less inflammable.

These officials stated the United States had offered helium to Germany.

FOUND COST TOO HIGH

They explained, however, that the Reich had not accepted the offer because this country did not possess sufficient foreign exchange supplies to pay for helium, which is more expensive than hydrogen.

Meanwhile, Friedrichshafen, where the LZ-130 is under construction and where the Hindenburg was built, was plunged into deep mourning. Crowds besieged the Zeppelin works here awaiting word of the fate of their relatives aboard the stricken ship.

Chief Engineer Duerr, who played an important part in construction of the Hindenburg, said:

"We are continuing construction of the new Zeppelin as drafted, and I personally do not believe changes in its construction will be necessary.

"The main thing is to get helium instead of hydrogen."

Nazi Germany was stunned and shocked by the disaster. The sad news was communicated immediately to Chancellor Hitler and Air Minister Goering.

NEWS STUNS BERLIN

When the story of the disaster was flashed to Berlin, government officials were so astonished they at first withheld it from newspapers.

But when it was confirmed, presses were stopped, accounts of the crash were rushed into print, and extra editions were issued.

Most of Berlin's morning papers' early editions had gone to the streets before news of the crash was received, ironically carrying headlines which blared:

"New York welcomes the Hindenburg!"

The stories described the airship's flight over the city. When these accounts were withdrawn and the crash account printed amazed readers rushed to newsstands and snatched the extra editions as fast as they could be delivered.

PUZZLED BY FIRE

The flight on which the Hindenburg met disaster was its first of the season. It had been thoroughly overhauled during the winter and 24 new cabins had been built into the giant hulk.

Engineers were at a loss to explain messages stating fire had broken out in the giant craft's tail.

They were completely baffled by this, refusing to accept theories the flames were caused by possible backfire of the rear engines, which might have ignited the gas. The only possible explanation, in their view, was that lightning might have caused the blaze.

The official German news agency had this to say regarding the disaster:

"It is with deep grief that the German people and the world will hear the news of the catastrophe. German aviation, which has had great success in the North and South Atlantic service, has not been spared a catastrophe which has befallen other nations.

SEEK SAFER WAY

"After this disaster, German pioneers will not slacken their daring. Count Zeppelin's heritage will not be abandoned. In Friedrichshafen a new ship (The LZ-130 is already nearing completion and will take the air shortly.

"Ever since the R-101 disaster German experts have been conducting searching tests to introduce the safest possible engineering features into German dirigible construction.

The engineers who had given years of their lives to this work believed they had made German airships—and particularly the Hindenburg—as safe as humanly possible.

The Hindenburg's smoking room, it was pointed out, had special fireproof walls and precautions were taken to insure that no passenger could inadvertently leave the room while smoking.

It was also arranged that cigarettes and matches should be available only in the smoking room.

The Hindenburg cost between $2,000,000 and $2,500,000 to build.

Radio Salute To Lost Zeps Final Flash

Hamburg, Germany, May 7 (INS)—The last radio message sent to Germany by the ill-fated dirigible Hindenburg was a salute to "Lox Zeppelins."

Officials here revealed today this final message was sent by the airship as it approached Lakehurst, N. J., at 8:50 p. m. German time (3:50 p. m. EDT) yesterday.

It was addressed to the Hamburg Naval League, which was unveiling a memorial to Zeppelins lost in the World War.

Zep Guarded Here by U. S. Planes

While there has been nothing to indicate that the Hindenburg disaster was anything but accidental, it was disclosed here today that there have always been fears of attempted sabotage by Communist or other anti-Nazi groups.

Coast Guard planes, carrying machine gun crews, convoyed the huge airliner all the way from the coast into Lakehurst last spring when the Hindenburg was making its maiden crossing into this country, federal officials said.

One of the planes detailed to this task was from Salem, under command of Lieutenant Perry Lyons. He carried a machine gun crew of four and picked up the Zeppelin at Long Island, escorting her to her mooring mast in New Jersey.

Orders from Washington for the Salem plane and other Coast Guard craft to convoy the Hindenburg had been prompted by rumors of a Communist plot in New York city, it was said.

Since then the greatest precautions have been exercised in and around the naval air station at Lakehurst to see that no suspicious persons get near enough to the Nazi air queen to do damage.

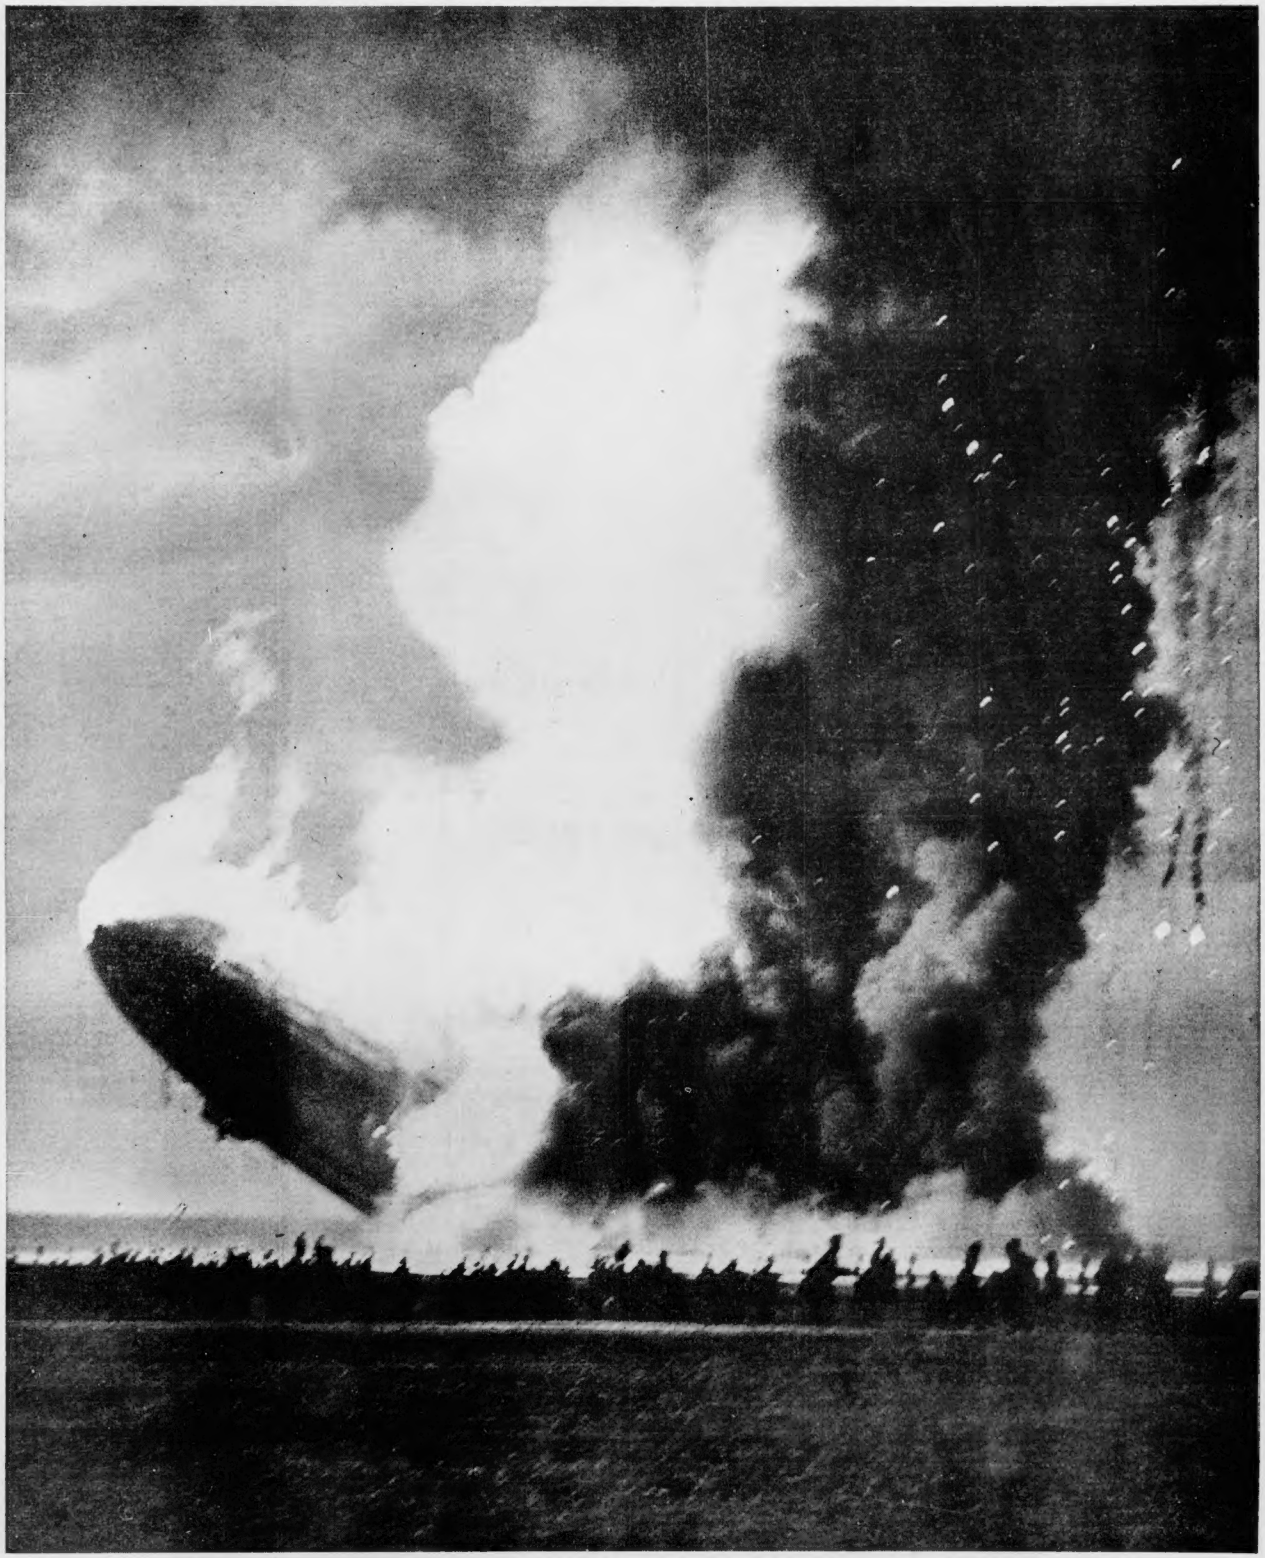
DIRIGIBLE PROSTRATE NOW, RAGING FIRE HAS ITS WAY



Now the once mighty Hindenburg is prostrate, and raging flames have their unimpeded way with it. The blaze is at its height, driving watchers and rescue squads to cover. Silhouettes of helpless onlookers are a tiny black fringe against the blinding brightness of the fire. Heavy smoke towers up, too, as the conflagration attacks material less combustible than the hydrogen gas which started it. Here's a picture never to be forgotten, likely never to be paralleled. News cameras were on hand to record it, for the big transatlantic dirigible's scheduled landing after her maiden trip of 1937 was an event of moment, disregarding possibilities of disaster. Disaster came. And the world now realized with horror how the tragedy looked at first hand.

DEATH, DISASTER SWOOP WITHOUT WARNING ON BIG ZEP

DEATH NEAR NOW—Still circling peacefully above the Lakehurst, N. J. landing field is the big, silver Hindenburg. No one sensed fear and no one of the watchers below has a suspicion that [illegible] and will be destroyed and [illegible] in a fiery liner within the next few moments. Yet swoop they will—and do!

DEATH SEARCHERS GAIN—The grim work of searching for bodies of the Hindenburg's dead progresses as the hulk of the giant sky liner begins to cool in spots. Watchers and work squads are still held at bay, however, where the blaze is still raging, at right, in the dirigible's aluminum ribbed skeleton. There's a lot of heat yet, though the flames begin to be glutted with their prey. How complete their destructive work has been is easily apparent where the [illegible] warped framework of the zep is open to inspection.

Copyright 1937, International News Photos

LOSES CLOTHES BUT LIVES. Terrific heat of the Hindenburg explosion burned clothes off this man but spared his life. He's an unidentified survivor being led from the scene of the Zeppelin disaster at Lakehurst, N. J. Scorched, bruised and dazed, he's still on his feet.

ZEP IS BLAST FURNACE. Roaring furnace heat of this flame-swept wreckage of what was once the great German dirigible Hindenberg kept rescue crews at a distance and promised utter cremation of many bodies. Fed by gasoline, oil and remnants of hydrogen gas, the blaze is turning the huge sky liner's hull into a melting-pot tangle of incandescent metal. Aluminum beams and girders are writhing in the blast.

SURVIVORS AND WITNESSES TELL OF BLAST HORROR

Lakehurst, N. J., May 7 (AP)—E. Z. Matthews first class machinist's mate, U. S. Navy, gave this vivid eyewitness account of the disaster to the Hindenburg:

"I saw the explosion, the whole thing, since I was underneath the very center of the dirigible when it fell.

"I was on the portside. I heard a terrifying explosion overhead and I was knocked down by the blast. I caught my balance and started to run when the second explosion hit me and no more had I get up from that than another blast hit me, and at the end I was no more than a hundred feet away from the burning ship.

"The port side of the ship gave way first, and then the opposite side, both opposite the motor nacelles on the big balloon.

"That was only the beginning of the trouble. As soon as the ship came down, the first watch had to haul the dead ones out of the wreck, and it was the most horrible experience I ever expect to go through.

"At the end, after we had taken all the living and the injured away, there were still the bodies in the wreckage, and with most of them, we had to burrow with our hands to find enough of the poor fellow to cart away and cover with a blanket.

"It was a nasty work. Plenty of us couldn't sleep last night."

First Lady Says Crash Terrible

Chicago, May 7 (AP)—Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt expressed sympathy today for survivors of the Hindenburg disaster as she changed planes en route to New York.

"It is terrible," she said. The first lady said, however, she had not lost her "flying nerve."

Bar Curious at Lakehurst

Lakehurst, N. J., May 7 (AP)—Curious persons were turned back by the hundreds today from the barred gates of the U. S. Naval Reservation, where lay the wreckage framework of the Hindenburg.

Fire ackets and marines imposed the official no entry" order after hundreds who had passed [illegible] the area at the time of the explosion were cleared from [illegible] beach with the aid of 45 [illegible] police.

Only doctors, nurses and those [illegible] pilots, airplane and official [illegible] were permitted on the ground [illegible]

SHENANDOAH CHIEF SETS BLAST BLAME

San Diego, Cal., May 7 (AP)— [illegible] station where the Hindenburg [illegible] Captain Frank McCrary, one-time commander of the ill-fated dirigible Shenandoah, said today he believed destruction of the Hindenburg probably was caused by a spark from one of the craft's D[illegible]

"It is more reasonable to assume that a flame from one of the Diesel engines ignited the hydrogen.

"These engines are pretty safe in that they carry no inflammable gasoline. But when they are in operation they continually give off flame. In event of a leak in one of the hydrogen cells, this could sustain the same danger[illegible]

ROOSEVELT TELLS OF HIS SORROW

Galveston, Tex., May 7 (AP)—President Roosevelt, learning of the disaster to the [illegible] Hindenburg at Lakehurst, N. J., at once sent a message to Chancellor Hitler [illegible] (AP) [illegible] German government and people.

It [illegible] statement [illegible] through [illegible] White House [illegible] the President [illegible]

[illegible]

I have learned of the disaster to the airship Hindenburg and offer you and the German people my deepest sympathy for the tragic loss of life which resulted from this unexpected and unhappy event."

To the policemen and [illegible]

"I am distressed to hear of the tragedy of the Hindenburg and extend my deep sympathy to the families of the passengers, officers and crew who lost their lives."

PETERMAN'S DISCOVERY

How Experts View Zep Hindenburg Disaster

By the Associated Press

What caused the crash of the Hindenburg?

Dr. Hugo Eckener, the airship's designer

"I should say that if this disaster was caused by sabotage, only the firing of a burning bullet into the bags could have accomplished it. That seems highly unlikely."

Captain Ernst Lehmann, its commander

"She just went up."

[illegible] Wilson, New Jersey state aviation director

"Something strange caused that tragedy."

Captain Frank McCarthy, once commander of the Shenandoah, [illegible] crashed 12 years ago

"It is more reasonable to assume that a flame from one of the Diesel engines ignited the hydrogen."

[illegible] American pioneer in lighter-than-air craft:

"Static electricity. The hydrogen gas bag would have gathered static in the electrical storm, and one of its landing ropes touching the wet ground could complete the circuit."

ANDOVER WOMAN'S MOTHER SURVIVES ZEP DISASTER

Andover, May 7—Mrs. Katherine Bolton, of South Main street, learned the truth about the condition of her mother, one of the few passengers to escape the Hindenburg disaster, shortly before noon today after hours of anguished suspense.

The durable [illegible]-year-old [illegible] was in what was to have been a happy reunion today in the Bolton home. Joseph Lehmann, owner of the Lehmann Rubber Company in Lawrence, and with [illegible] German manufacturing connections, had gone to Lakehurst, N. J., to meet his wife, 52-year-old mother whom she had not seen for six years.

SUFFERS FROM SHOCK

At noon today he called to tell Mrs. Bolton that although [illegible] mother remained in the Pinewood hospital at Pinedale, near Lakehurst, the [illegible] is past, and her life has been saved.

"I am so happy," Mrs. Bolton exclaimed, herself only yesterday returned from a hospital in Boston, where she has been ill for several weeks.

"My husband said mother's condition is not considered serious, though she will remain under observation for an indefinite time.

"She sustained possible fractured ribs, he said, but right now she is mostly suffering from a nervous shock."

It was [illegible] that [illegible] her daughter, who [illegible]

This Hindenburg disaster victim, Mrs. Marie Kleeman, was on her way to Boston and Andover to visit her daughter, Mrs. John Bolton of Andover. Mrs. Kleeman is a survivor, but is suffering from burns and shock.

BOLTON AT SCENE

[illegible] Mrs. Marie Kleeman of Nuremberg, Germany, said this is her second time in America.

Bolton was in Lakehurst waiting for the giant dirigible to be moored, when the tragedy occurred.

Then while he sought to find her in the hysteria that swept the landing field and searched through the survivors' pitiful where victims were taken, the first news of the disaster came over the radio to Mrs. Bolton here.

Agonizing hours passed while she waited for some message from her husband.

Today she knows the truth. Her mother is safe, they will [illegible] happy [illegible]

PINK FINAL 1ST WITH NEWS OF DISASTER

Disaster rocked the nation in the [illegible] hours of daylight when [illegible] and stamped it as New England's leading afternoon newspaper [illegible].

"Today's news today!" [illegible] has been the slogan of the Night Pink Edition.

[illegible] was Today's News Today and Evening Extra. The Night Pink Edition of the Boston Evening American was the [illegible] to appear on the streets [illegible] the [illegible] was [illegible] the [illegible] Hindenburg exploded in flames causing death and destruction.

FIRST ON STREETS

The Night Pink was first on the streets carrying the first news of the terrible tragedy while the rest of the afternoon newspapers lay idle on press corners and counters awaiting the [illegible] newspaper [illegible] more than an hour later. [illegible] coming so old as yesterday's.

And that was the news they had [illegible] the Boston Evening American [illegible] Pink was out on the streets bringing TOMORROW'S NEWS TODAY. You didn't have to wait for the morning papers [illegible] next day of the tragedy.

PROUD OF TRIUMPHS

The Night Pink Edition has scored many triumphs since it was [illegible] more than a year ago. [illegible] of 17 x 5 paper are [illegible] tremendous achievement. It is a tragic air crash and [illegible] to remind its readers of the fact that again the NIGHT PINK EDITION TRIUMPHED.

[illegible] who have missed the exciting action, from its news [illegible] with the [illegible] of the [illegible] to the [illegible] of the [illegible] NEXT TO HAVE TO WAIT FOR THE MORNING PAPERS [illegible] THE COMPLETE STORY OF THE DEPTH. BUY THE NIGHT PINK EXTRA AND GET IT TO YOU THE DAY IT HAPPENS.

'PINK' SCORES ONCE AGAIN WITH BIG NEWS FIRST

First again with the big news! Here's the Boston Evening American's "Pink" extra which scored a clean beat on all Boston papers with the story of the Hindenburg disaster at Lakehurst, N. J. As usual, the "Pink" lived up to its motto: "Today's news TODAY." If you want to get it today, get the Boston Evening American. The "Pink" told you first about the Zeppelin explosion. It'll be FIRST again with other stories, big and little.

VON WIEGAND FEARED FLIGHT OF ZEPPELIN

"Karl H. von Wiegand, veteran International Service foreign correspondent who pioneered in lighter-than-air travel aboard the Graf Zeppelin on her first flight around the world, gave his [illegible] to the loss of the Hindenburg in the following remarkable cabled dispatch. He was invited to make the fateful trip but turned down the bid because of a feeling of foreboding."

Highlight Facts About Tragedy Air Giant

Lakehurst, N. J., May 7 (AP)—Here is what the Hindenburg was like before her crash:

THE SHIP: Largest and most luxurious airship ever built—803 feet long—cruising range of 8500 miles—capacity of 50 passengers and 60 crew and 24,000 pounds of freight—four 1000-horsepower Diesel engines gave it a maximum speed of 84 miles an hour.

PASSENGER ACCOMMODATIONS: 25 staterooms with folding desks and running water—air conditioning—dining room, lounge and smoking room—completely-equipped electrical kitchen—150-foot, glassed-in promenade.

MECHANICS: Moved by four, four-bladed, wooden propellers, mounted on four power cars, directed from a forward control gondola, from which gears, levers and shafts, connecting with ship's maneuvering apparatus and gas supply were operated—radio room—generators for lighting, steering, magnetic compasses and cooking.

CONSTRUCTION: Aluminum alloy longitudinal girders, giving the ship 36 "sides," joined by metal rings and cross girders covered with a strong, water-tight skin of cotton material—two communicating passageways—huge tanks on either side for engine crude oil—hydrogen gas bags strung in a continuous chain from bow to stern.

OFFICIAL U. S. REPORT ON DISASTER

Washington, May 7 (AP)—Commander Charles F. Rosendahl, commander of the Lakehurst air station, sent the following report to the Navy Department in a message filed at 2:15 a. m. (EST):

The commanding officer of this station has communicated to the commandant of the Fourth Naval District, Navy Yard, Philadelphia, his immediate superior and to the Navy Department at the Munson information relative to the loss of the German airship Hindenburg at this station on the afternoon of May 6.

Briefly summed up the following represents the situation as now known. The airship Hindenburg, a total loss from a hydrogen fire originating at or near the stern of the ship and in the vicinity of the landing operations at the Naval Air Station Lakehurst about 6:25 p. m., Eastern Standard Time, Thursday, May 6, 1937.

The landing was being conducted in the normal manner. The ship's main landing rope had been dropped to the ground from an altitude of about 200 feet and there engaged by the corresponding ground ropes used in landing the ship.

HEROIC RESCUES

About four minutes after the ropes had been dropped a fire appeared in the after part of the ship and worked progressively forward. The ship settled to the ground very fast and was practically engulfed in flames for her entire length by the time the ground was reached.

It is impossible at this time to ascertain the various steps in connection with the rescue of the personnel of the Hindenburg, but it is apparent that there were notable cases of rescue work by persons in the ship and without.

The fire burned for several hours and was finally extinguished completely by means of chemical extinguishers and water.

According to the best information now available out of the total of 97 persons on board 64 escaped alive. Including in this are 44 members of the crew of 61 and 20 passengers out of a total of 36. Two of the 20 missing passengers are reported to be officials injured. Seven persons of the 36 are still in doubt.

A number of [illegible] persons received [illegible] were [illegible] upon [illegible] of the [illegible] of the [illegible] bodies were recovered. The search [illegible] and will probably become more effective with daylight.

WRECKAGE INTACT

Of the three airship captains on board Captain Lehmann and Captain Pruss escaped with bad burns. Captain Wittemann miraculously escaped with the slightest injury as did a considerable number of the crew.

Medical assistance was quickly available from many sources and those injured were conveyed immediately to the dispensary at the station where they were treated by the station surgeon, Dr. [illegible]. The Naval Air Station has been closed to [illegible] and [illegible] were [illegible] to [illegible] [illegible] [illegible]

FORD SEES U. S. PROFITS TAX AIMED AT HIM

Detroit, May 7 (AP)—Henry Ford opposed the undistributed profits tax provision of the new revenue bill today. Administration leaders in Congress declared unequivocally that the measure was designed to force corporations to distribute their surplus earnings.

Ford said he also would oppose the federal tax on undistributed profits.

He discussed it in an interview, as the company announced an increase in pay for 168,000 workers who are participating in the company's international financing plan.

Ford Motor Company, he declared, is not affected.

"The real purpose is to tax the independents large and small, out of existence," he said. "The financiers want to drive every independent business man to borrow money to make American business just a financial tribute to the money lenders.

"They want to send the companies they can't control to Wall street. And it is only the companies they can't control who are objecting. The others are all in one pocket."

SEES CONGRESS SHIFT

He saw a trend away from what he termed "New Deal" ideas, he noted in Congress toward that and similar ideas.

"Congress did not concoct this ramshackle legislation, although it passed the bill," he said. "Now it is trying to see how it can do better.

"For that reason, you hear more good things said about Congress today than for six years past. Of course the members have heard from home, but that also means that Congress and the people are coming to the same conclusions.

"No one with the interests of the country at heart would plan such a taxing program. It must have had a target. Naturally, we are the target.

"If we knew where the money is going, if we knew it was doing anything to lift the national level, that would be different. But the facts where things are not getting any better are the spots where they say the money is going. It has kept the people at the same low level where the depression found them. The only lifting done in this country is done by industry."

URGES MORE OUTPUT

"If the government took every cent of Ford profits and used the money to raise the standards of the people, I'd take my hat off to them. That is what we have been trying to do for 30 years. They are not doing it."

Henry praised the various government agencies succeeded in "priming the pump' for industry," he was asked:

"Government money provides no purchasing power and no market for industry," Ford replied. "And it hasn't provided employment either, else why do we hear of millions of men still unemployed?"

"Our government does not understand the primary necessity, which is production. We have not enough of anything, and all the politicians can think of is to make it harder for producers to produce.

"The answer to the unemployment problem is to produce more goods, and that is what we are trying to do."

REVOLT AGAINST CATALAN RULE SPREADING

Cerbere (France-Spanish Frontier), May 7 (AP)—The anarchist revolt against the Catalan government spread today from Barcelona to towns and villages outside the regional capital.

The anarchists, border advices said, seized the town of Figueras, with the aid of soldiers garrisoned at San Fernando fortress.

Public officials were ousted there and at Gerona by militant anarchists protesting against what they consider to conservative an administration by the autonomous Catalan regime, allied with the Madrid-Valencia government.

A Valencia column en route to Barcelona to help restore order was reported to have seized Martorell, a railway junction point 18 miles southwest of Barcelona, on the highway near Tarragona in Tarragona province.

Street fighting in the civil war within a civil war spread to Barcelona's suburbs, the meager advices said.

2806 Women, Children Refugees Reach France

Bordeaux, France, May 7 (AP)—Two shiploads of Spanish refugees from tottering Bilbao, exactly 2806 in all, reached safety in France today with an escort of British men-of-war.

Women with babies in their arms and children clinging to their skirts, the first refugees of the war to reach safety, left the French ports aboard two Spanish ships.

The steamship Habana, jammed with 2483 passengers, 2000 of them children, anchored at La Rochelle, and the Izarra brought 193 children and 170 adults—most of them women—to Pauillac.

76 Killed by Bomb Raids in Zaragoza

Zaragoza, Spain, May 7 (AP)—Anti-government Zaragoza's death toll in government bombing raids within four days rose to 76 today, and insurgent authorities asserted most of the victims were non-combatants.

Coincidentally, insurgent officers reported a series of "fierce attacks" by Catalan Leftist troops east of the city had been wrecked on the insurgents' elaborate defenses.

Labor Man New Tennessee Senator

$150 Safe Robbery At No. Quincy High

What a power-line "trouble-shooter" is up against

FOR 20 years, Al Tafft has been climbing poles and steel towers—working in a maze of high-voltage wires—repairing as many as 200 short circuits per day. Around him 11,000 volts lurk. It's a tense job that will test digestion if anything will! Here's Al's comment on that: "Sure! Working among high-voltage cables—in rain, snow, or sleet—isn't calculated to help one's digestion. But mine doesn't give me trouble. I smoke Camels with my meals and afterward. Camels set me right! They're right down my alley for mildness. And no matter how many I smoke, Camels never get on my nerves."

How's your digestion?

Make Camels a regular part of your dining. Smoking Camels speeds up the flow of digestive fluids—alkaline digestive fluids—that mean so much to good digestion and your sense of well-being. Camels are so mild, they are better for steady smoking. And Camels are gentle to your throat—always

HOLLYWOOD CELEBRITIES go to Eleanor Tennant for tennis instruction. She has helped develop some of today's highest-ranking women tennis stars. Eleanor says: "I often think that coaching takes more out of one than playing does. That's why I so often light up a Camel between games. I get a 'lift' in energy with a Camel. I rank Camels tops for mildness—they don't irritate my throat."

MEL OTT, a big gun of the New York Giants, Nat'l League Champions, has been playing in big leagues since he was 16 years of age. His specialty—home-runs! "Believe me," says Mel, "I'm mighty careful to smoke a cigarette that doesn't interfere with my physical condition. That's Camels in any man's language. I'll take my hat off to Camels for mildness and their rich flavor."

PRIZES HEALTHY NERVES. Fred [illegible] Jr. Nat'l Unlimited Motorboat Champion 2 years in a row, tells one of the many reasons why Camel is his cigarette. "I've driven over a thousand miles in races, every foot of the way a strain on nerves," he says. "I've smoked Camels regularly. They never get on my nerves. Camels are so mild, I smoke them as much as I like."

"Thank you New England"

Your demand for the new Hy-Power and Aero Solvenized gasolines has nearly doubled our sales.

Just four weeks ago JENNEY introduced Hy-Power and Aero Solvenized—the first gasolines to combat hard carbon.

We knew we had a new and outstanding product, that it destroys gum, the hard carbon binder—increases mileage 2 to 4 miles per gallon—is something entirely different in motor fuels. We knew from tests that this is the greatest gasoline value we, or any other company, ever offered.

But we had no idea you would find that out so quickly. Right from the first day this new gasoline was introduced, our sales jumped to new high records.

You'll never regret it. These new JENNEY Solvenized gasolines are the most important improvement in gasoline in ten years.

Thousands are telling us how much Solvenized is already increasing their mileage, power and pep. The longer you use it, the better performance it will give you.

Again, thank you, New England, for this overwhelming demonstration of confidence in JENNEY. Here's our pledge you'll continue to get extra value every time you use JENNEY gasoline.

(The Holland's nurses may well be warned to look with awe hereafter on the lean figure bedded in Holland Hall at St. Elizabeth's, it turning out yesterday that George, even abed, proves a super-salesman and peddles an automobile he never sees, owned by a lad he never meets—and both in a far land.

GEORGE HOLLAND

Thus is the custom-built, 21-cylinder Black Hillman, owned by Duke David (Me for Love) Windsor, which George writes a piece about a few Sundays back—and as a result, Barnett B. Lester and Maury Oliver Goldsmith of the Hub's Exclusive Features Syndicate bid the boiler in for four figures and it soon come to Boston.)

Yankee in King Klieg's Court

Ranny Weeks, the Hub songster and musicker, got away to a dour start in Hollywood but the lad is soaring despite the gray getaway . . . In his first picture, "Bill Cracks Down," they rushed the flicker through in nine days, directors were swapped three times and Ranny himself was as green as a Vt. mountain . . . Despite all this, however, Ranny clicked and Hollywood big-shots are telling him "You're a cinch" . . . Since then he's been in "Hit Parade" and "Rhythm in the Clouds," and is angling for an airwave singing-announcer assignment . . .

Love in Bloom:

Across the street from little Janie Fallon, two-year-old dotter of the police supt., lives a three-year-old lad . . . Every day he climbs on his hands and knees up the Fallon front steps and does show-off stunts while Janie stands at the window . . . Then he kisses her, through the glass, although this would appear to be far from satisfying . . . Already the courter has left his Indian hat and his bee-bee gun on the steps for her . . . The height of small-boy giving.

Once Over Lightly:

The kids—Jane, 13, George, 12, and Nancy, 9—have their stage bapers in Gertrude Deian a annual dance recital and revue at the Repertory . . . P. A. Santosuosso, ed. the Italian News, plans a Mussolini meeting early in July . . . He'll sail on the Rex . . .

New Hampshire's Gov. Murphy was hitting on all high in his fervent peroration to a N. H. nurses' graduating class . . . "And now remember, girls," he orated, "through all the years to come these beautiful white uniforms will always stand for Murphy—harrump—that is, I mean mercy" . . . Hub firemen going sissy? . . . New apparatus coming out will be covered . . . Like the protective wagons and patrols . . . Fie on you, Billy Bell . . .

First open-air mass ever celebrated in North End will be at 10:15 next Sun. . . . Occasion is the first anniversary of Italy's new empire in E. Africa . . . 'Prince and Pauper' Is Tops

By PEGGY DOYLE

Hunch-playing Hal Wallis of Warner Brothers is one movie mogul who might be excused if he is reaping a federal bag enough for Joe Cook's well-known big-eared boy of the circus, or a horse, for that matter.

If you'll allow the answer is that right off you haven't seen Warner's new production of "The Prince and the Pauper" a thing that now is the Mecca toward which all the Mark Twain classes want to be headed for a celebration week.

And it was Wallis who decreed that the new picture must be read and that then everyone else was to join the Prince and Pauper cult. The Mark Twain [illegible]

Her Correspondence Fiance Arrives and Marie Goes To Welcome Him

SYNOPSIS

Marie Alexander lives in Hollywood, at 657 Dover [illegible]. That ill-sounding address may sound exciting but it isn't [illegible] Dover Drive is a dusty, hot little street, far from the [illegible]. There is a sign in the window, "Julie's [illegible]. Underneath it is another sign, "Circulating [illegible]."

[illegible] in the old silent film days—is Marie's [illegible] with Julie's third husband, Charles Bronson. Marie has the temperament for the movies. She takes out her longing for romance by corresponding with Edward Wilson of Cleveland, whose letter to a correspondence club she has answered.

She looks forward to a first meeting with Edward, but fears it too. He arrives in Los Angeles without notifying her and Marie is so flustered during the appointment with Edward that she goes round in circles.

Julie discovers how Charlie guessed the "pen pal" (as they call Edward) [illegible].

CHAPTER II

"Maybe I'm clairvoyant." Again his big sallow face crinkled into silent laughter.

"You'd better look out for me. I read your thoughts. But you wouldn't have to be very smart to make that guess.

What else has she ever gotten excited over, but him and his air mail letters?"

But, Charlie, she didn't know he was coming! And you know what? I don't think she wanted him to come—ever.

"She's a funny kid, and I tell you she'd rather sit in there in the window and read books and moon about him than meet him.

[illegible] that she [illegible] Marie [illegible] Ma used to [illegible] getting [illegible]. I confess I hadn't [illegible] thought of poor Ma for [illegible] years, and all of a sudden [illegible] Marie with her face all plastered with cold cream and her hands shaking, I thought of Ma again.

"She always said that was the [illegible] of a real actress. I used to shake her head over me because I never got excited—and I [illegible] anything and I guess I never did—until he [illegible] Julie [illegible] she said. Good old [illegible]

Rowing Revival At Harvard | Bolles Knows His Business

By JACK CONWAY

I BELIEVE the most startling change that has occurred at Harvard in recent years is the new interest in rowing. This fact was very evident during the luncheon at the Harvard Varsity Club, which was attended by a large number of members as well as by coaches of the various athletic teams and some present day football greats.

MR. BOSTON

Tommy Bolles spoke for rowing, Dick Harlow for football, Fred Mitchell for baseball and Jaakko Mikkola for track.

As a casual observer, I thought there was more enthusiasm over what Tommy Bolles had to say about the Harvard crew than anything else that was discussed.

Bolles came from the Pacific coast to take charge of Harvard's rowing. His 1937 crew won a length victory over Princeton, and then went on to defeat Tech and Rutgers. Tomorrow it will clash with Columbia and Tech on the Charles and, with good weather, the race will be witnessed by more than 30,000 persons.

There was a period at Harvard when its crews attracted as much attention as its football teams. Then came years of decay in rowing. This condition was partly due to positions in the Crimson shell being gained through social connections rather than athletic ability.

Apart from the fact such a system does not give a crew the [illegible] there is the additional evil of making [illegible] the drawing room.

[illegible] situation has been changed and now a can[illegible] stands or falls on his merit.

IMPORTANCE OF CONDITION

"When the Harvard crew first started training, we would work for a mile or so," said Tommy. "The distance was gradually increased until the crew could cover three or four miles without effort.

"In the Princeton race, our boys were in fine condition. Princeton took an early lead, pulling at the rate of 36 strokes a minute against 32 for Harvard.

"Our crew drew up even with Princeton during the latter stages of the race, and then went on to win by approximately a length.

"Physical condition is more important in rowing than in any other branch of athletics, and you will find Harvard's oarsmen ready for the test this year.

"When we meet Navy and Penn over the Henley distance in Philadelphia, you will find our boys can show creditably at any distance.

"I have always felt that a first class crew could make a respectable showing whether racing at a mile distance or over the four-mile route."

[illegible] for the Harvard race. This means there will be some [illegible] competition in the big race at New London in June.

The [illegible] Harvard-Yale races is always colorful. There are [illegible] hundreds of small craft that make the trip to New London for the race.

In recent years some of these parties have attracted more attention than the race itself, but I believe the race will be the [illegible] this year.

[illegible] Bolles impresses me as a man who knows his business [illegible] and the necessary drive to get the best out [illegible]

FRED MITCHELL ON PITCHERS

I LIKE THE story Fred Mitchell told about pitchers.

"When George Stallings managed the Braves," Mitchell said, "he remarked that if he died and went to Purgatory he hoped nobody would send him a pitcher who didn't have control. He felt he would have troubles enough without being bothered by a wild pitcher.

"One of my chief worries with the Harvard nine has been to get a pitcher with control. In major league baseball it is the general opinion that pitching is 60 per cent of any man's ball club. In college baseball, I believe pitching is 75 per cent of the success of a team."

SPRING FOOTBALL PRACTICE

[illegible] spring football [illegible] Harvard's [illegible] week. The best way [illegible] players.

You will find well coached players on our team next fall," said Harlow. "Our 1936 eleven would have beaten our 1935 team by three touchdowns and I believe that our 1937 eleven will be superior to last year's outfit.

The boys have worked hard, and we shall get results. I had my best football material the first year I was at Harvard, but I now have better coached players, and they will gain results.

I've been stressing the value of blocking in our training drills. Good blocking paves the way for touchdowns."

[illegible] Ford of [illegible]

"That was an inspired run Ford made against Yale last Fall," said Harlow. "He always plays inspired football against Yale.

ANN MARSTERS' BEST BETS FOR TODAY

ANN MARSTERS

Ann Marsters, girl handicapper, will try to come up with two winners today. She is picking GOLDEN THOUGHT to win the fifth race at Narragansett Park, while GILBERT ELSTON is her choice to win the sixth race.

Real Jam, picked by Miss Marsters to win yesterday, finished second, while Little Dinah, the other selection of Miss Marsters ran out of the money.

Today is another day for race goers, and GOLDEN THOUGHT and GILBERT ELSTON may give them something to cheer about.

ANN MARSTERS' BEST BETS
$2 Win, GOLDEN THOUGHT, Narragansett 5th.
$2 Win, GILBERT ELSTON, Narragansett 7th.
BANKROLL NOW $478.80. DAY'S PLAY $4

The early morning clockers report these horses have turned in some fast workouts.

Miss Marsters has accepted an offer of $1,000 from Walter O'Hara to conduct a betting experiment.

Under the terms of the O'Hara offer, $500 was donated at once to the Christmas Basket Fund of the Boston Evening American-Sunday Advertiser.

The other $500 is being used as a betting stake by Miss Marsters, and the balance of the fund will be turned over to the Basket Fund at the end of the experiment.

THIS IS LIFE

BY

Robert E. Rogers

On the morning after the so-called riot at Technology I happened to be conducting a public speaking class among some freshmen. One of them, whose preparation for the class had obviously been interrupted by engaging (mildly, he averred) in the proceedings, undertook to make good his speech with an account of the previous evening's festivities.

ROBERT E. ROGERS

He tied his remarks together to a certain extent by picking the general topic of the mob spirit and crowd psychology to furnish a background for his specific illustrations.

It seemed to this freshman that the whole thing was very innocent in its inception and pretty good-humored in its developments—until opposition developed.

The thing was a combination of the spontaneous and the imitative; spring, a warm evening, moonlight, and the Harvard "riot" the evening before. These were the ingredients.

The only way to treat a mob in action, he decided from the vast depths of his freshman experiences, was to go with it, not to antagonize it and to keep on smiling.

He mentioned particularly the M. D. C. (Metropolitan District Commission) police officers and praised them highly for treating the whole thing good-humoredly, smiling it off as much as possible, and gaining the good will of the students.

He also mentioned the fact that those automobiles who were delayed by saw-horses placed as barriers across Memorial Drive, and who in spite of the annoyance and delay took it pleasantly got by without much trouble.

Allowed to Pass on Sense of Humor

One car in which the driver rose and gave the Hitler salute and a mock oration so pleased the crowd that the barriers were removed and they were allowed to drive on.

On the other hand, he said, automobilists who were irritated and tried to drive down the sidewalks in the roadway made no progress. Some of them, even, were pushed back by human strength.

This student said significantly, "It would be a good thing if the head of the Metropolitan Police would give a course of training to the Cambridge Police on the proper method of handling mobs without getting them sore," on the assumption that the boy's intentions were not evil but merely mischievous, that, however exasperating and annoying there was really no harm.

My freshman seemed to think that perhaps the Cambridge policemen's nerves were a little on edge from lack of sleep and over-exertion the previous evening at Harvard and that therefore they lost their tempers a little easily and waded into the crowd with their nightsticks more than there was any real necessity.

One man sustained a broken hand, another was knocked out by a night-stick. The officer refused to allow his friends to take him to the Tech infirmary for treatment, but after he had been locked up it was found necessary to send him for treatment to a hospital. At least, that is what my freshman averred.

Bears Out Old Tech, Harvard Tradition

This seems to bear out a certain old tradition among Cambridge undergraduates both at Harvard and Technology, that Cambridge police officers are rather inclined to bad tempers and impatience and nasty action and unnecessary strong-arm handling affairs of the sort.

Of course the existence of an imagined caste are more imaginary than real, does not help matters any. But certainly Cambridge police officers seem not to suffer fools gladly.

There is no particular reason to clamor that something should be done about it. Such affairs are rare, infrequent, a matter of youthful tradition, and usually innocent of serious intent.

They probably keep the boys from worse excesses—in private.

The actual damage is usually not serious and there are always undergraduate clubs to which it can be assessed. There is some reason to believe that the men whom the authorities arrest are usually innocent by-standers who couldn't move quick enough.

But pretty soon the boys of both schools will be busy getting ready for examinations so there will be free time for spontaneous explosions of high spirits.

WOMEN'S 'New Order' HAILED

ALUMNI HEARS MISS PERKINS

South Hadley, May 7—The past few years "have inevitably hastened the development of a new order opening up new opportunities for well-trained and public-spirited women," it was declared today at Mt. Holyoke College by Secretary of Labor Frances Perkins.

Speaking before 3000 fellow-alumnae at exercises commemorating Mt. Holyoke's 100th anniversary, the labor secretary asserted that women's organizations are "a tremendous force for progress."

In recognition of outstanding service to the college 11 alumnae were presented honorary degrees at the close of the morning exercises. Mrs. Ralph L. White of Worthington, N. Y., a regent president making the presentations.

Those Honored

Medals went to Dr. Mary Dole of Shelburne Falls and Miss Florence Purington, dean emeritus, both of the class of 1886; Miss Carolyn D. Greene, '87, Holyoke; Miss Bertha A. Haseltine, '88, dean emeritus; Miss Alice Day Shelmire, '87, Philadelphia; Mrs. Mary Dudley Woodbridge, '88, New York; Miss Mabel Ames, '78, New York; Miss Frances Perry, '81, Montclair, N. J.; Miss Mary L. Matthews, '81, Mt. Vernon, N. Y.; Miss Mary W. Cromwell, '89, New Haven, Conn.; Miss Bertha B. Gilchrist, '92, Rutland, Vt.; Mrs. Charlotte Lovett Gilmore, '02, White Plains, N. Y.; Miss Mary A. Clark, '05, New York, and Mrs. Sarah Streeter Lester, '11, Roselle, N. J.

Miss Perkins declared in her address that more and more discriminations based on sex would have been eliminated, as those departments of municipal, state and national government did away with civil service tests, "but there is no desire on the part of the people of this country to get rid of the service of intelligent, good girls and women."

"It is a generally recognized fact," she said, "that women on the whole have a strong social and humanitarian interest, and if they have given special study to such problems, as have many college women, they need rather strikingly in various kinds of public service.

Challenge to All

"Certainly a challenge comes to all college women today to get a true understanding of the changes in our social order, the reasons for these changes and the ways in which to adapt themselves to such developments."

Miss Perkins said that she was showing "signs of age" when Mt. Holyoke was founded and that the college's influence

She declared that graduates of her college have made a name for the world as missionaries, teachers, founders of schools and as physicians and have made a splendid record in public education, all growing the suffering people about [illegible].

"Mt. Holyoke alumnae," she said, "have helped to push out the frontiers of education. It still remains for them to win—not because they are women, but because of their active and influential contributions to society—the recognition, the rewards and the increased opportunities for which their education and their scholastic attainments have and are fitting them."

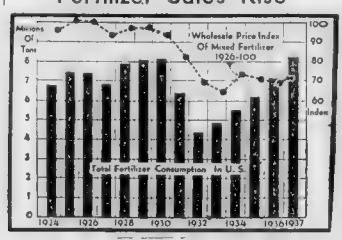
Fertilizer Sales Rise



Larger farm income and the loosening of crop restriction plans this year should result an increase in fertilizer sales in 1937, according to a study by Standard Statistics. It is estimated that sales during the active Spring months would be between 18 per cent and 15 per cent higher than the similar period last year.

Fertilizer prices are being well maintained, and demand is showing improvement over 1936. Standard's estimate of consumption of 8,500,000 tons this year would mark a new peak for the industry.

'Heat Is Heat, Vest Is Vest'

A broker who for practical purposes will be called Tom Jones, which isn't his real name, found the tropical May heat unbearable yesterday. He opened the window as far as it would go, but it seemed to get even hotter. At last he perspired. "Whew! It's weather!" and he took off his coat. A new clerk in the office proceeded to think so. Late in the afternoon [illegible] and the sun began to set, an office boy hailed at Mr. Jones' desk and whispered, "Don't look now, sir, but I think you have on two vests!" Mr. Jones waited a while, then looked and saw enough to [illegible] two vests, one of which had been making the tropical May heat seem so unbearably tropical. It seems that during the lunch hour he stopped in at a clothing store and tried on some new suits with the plan of purchasing one, then had accidentally walked out of the store wearing one of the store's suits as well as his own. Misinterpretation Of Net Lifts Stock

Again the International Hydro-Electric System published an earnings statement [illegible] which, it stated, that was [illegible] misinterpreted. The resulted in a net for the class A stock and 6 per cent bonds. Net reported for the March 31 year was equal to $1.13 a share on the class A, while for the quarter it was 60 cents a share. But, the brokerage house points out, these reported earnings are not cash income, being only equity in undistributed earnings of subsidiaries. Actually, the broker's analysis declares, the only cash income accruing to the parent company is from some small properties in up-state New York and northern New England. This provides for Hydro's administration expenses, the firm remarks, and leaves a balance of about $150,000 annually. Parent company preferred arrears total over $1,500,000. Little hope of any funds from the Canadian properties can be had, Rhoades & Co. asserts, for Canadian Hydro must conserve cash for its 1941 maturity.

Steel Foundries Preferred Called

American Steel Foundries has called for redemption on June 30 all of its $7 preferred stock at 110. On that date also the regular quarterly dividend of $1.75 a share will be paid to stockholders of record June 15.

The redemption is being accomplished through the proceeds of the offering of 198,085 shares of common stock at $40 a share to stockholders through rights which expire May 15.

WEEKLY Business REVIEW

MARKETS UNSETTLED

By ERIC FRIEDHEIM
International News Service Staff Correspondent

Washington, May 7—A pronounced decline in speculative purchasing of commodities was reported by commerce experts this week following the broad and sharp recession in wholesale price levels.

While price quotations steadied early this week, commodity and security markets were generally unsettled. The department estimated the recent decline in stock prices has wiped out approximately one-fourth of the gain since March, 1935.

Buying orders in many lines of commodities continued to recede although production, for the most part maintained the high rate attained earlier in the year.

Automobile output was expanding toward a seasonal peak with the industry operating at a velocity comparable to 1929 despite sporadic labor disputes in several plants.

Flood conditions in the Pittsburgh-Wheeling area slackened steel production temporarily but mills reopened promptly. Slight declines in textile output was noted, but production of petroleum, building materials and soft coal showed gains during the week.

For the week ending May 1, electrical output was 33 per cent above last year's volume while for the first three weeks of April, privately-owned construction contracts increased more than seasonally.

Money in circulation last month amounted to $6,426,700,000, the Treasury revealed. This represented a circulation of $48.75 per capita and an increase of approximately $50,000,000 over March. Circulation on April 1 a year ago was $5,885,000,000.

New heavy gold movements from abroad this week drained the government's cash reserves to their lowest point in many years. The current working balance has dipped below the $400,000,000 despite extra weekly cash borrowings instituted recently. Observers predict a major borrowing operation next month to replenish the federal cash till.

Babson Views U. S. Condition as 'Critical'

Beloit, Wis., May 7 (AP)—Roger Babson, member of the Babson statistical organization of Babson Park, Mass., saw the condition of the United States today as "critical" and a forerunner to a darker depression than the last.

"Business is booming and will continue to get better for the next two years," he said in an interview here yesterday.

"The bond market has hit the ceiling for a long time to come. This is not true, however, of the stock and commodity markets."

Although he predicted "higher prices in the immediate future," Babson said "This country is in a critical condition and unless there is a sweeping spiritual revival in the nation, we will have a depression within the next 18 years that will make the last one look like a Sunday school picnic."

HEAVY INDUSTRIES

Doubtful Outlook FOR IRON, STEEL In This Quarter

By LEWIS HANEY
Professor of Economics, New York University

New York, May 7—Much importance attaches to the condition of the iron and steel industry at this time. More than any other, it represents the basic heavy industries of the country and there has come some doubt as to outlook in this quarter.

A few days ago it was announced that production would be curtailed. This, however, appears to have been merely a temporary interruption caused by a minor flood situation in the Ohio river valley. Pittsburgh production has already snapped back two points to 94 per cent and Wheeling 23 points to 98 per cent.

But there remains the possibility that a broader and more gradual rounding off in activity may be near. The chief basis for this possibility lies in the ending of various stimulants to buyers. Such a move might bring reaction lasting for several months.

Perhaps as good a statement of the situation as any is found in an Iron Age report from Cleveland, Ohio, which says: "There has been no increase in the volume of steel going into consumption, but consumers (though some are still pressing for deliveries) are not showing the anxiety to get under cover for extended requirements that they did before the uncertainty regarding third-quarter prices was removed."

This tells the story. Prior to April there was a scramble among steel consumers to get in line for a favorable position on the order books of the steel makers. Then it was realized that neither strikes nor further price advances were likely. In fact, prices were announced as unchanged for the third quarter. Immediately the scramble ceased.

Now there is some "open capacity." The steel scrap market has reacted from its extraordinarily high level. Naturally some people are wondering if the "cycle" is over.

* * *

The answer depends upon the condition of stocks and unfilled orders, and upon the outlook for new business. And in neither respect do I find that the indications point toward any severe or prolonged slump. In fact, I am inclined to think that the artificial stimulation of speculative forward buying was stopped in time to have prevented an over-extended boom this spring.

There are a few indications of trouble. For example, reports from Chicago tell of some large steel sheet consumers failing to "specify" on their previously placed orders. (This, in a sense, resembles a "cancellation.") Some stove manufacturers in Cleveland territory are said to be stocked up with steel for the rest of the year.

On the whole, however, there are few signs of excessive stocks or unfilled orders. Most reports are to the effect that manufacturing consumers are still using pressure to get early deliveries of steel ordered as, for example, hot rolled bars in Pittsburgh. The previous heavy movement of standard pipe from jobbers' warehouses has now brought renewed jobber buying. "Specifications" on orders for sheets, and bolts, nuts and rivets coming from the automobile and railway industries, have increased.

Anyhow, my impression is that April orders were good enough to maintain the volume of unfilled orders so that they show no serious decline.

* * *

As to prospects for new business, the chief cloud seems to be the backwardness of the building industries, partly on account of high costs, and partly on account of the tapering off of government spending for that purpose. Spring business has been very disappointing to makers of fabricated steel.

But these unfavorable indications are, I think, more than offset by the fact that steel buying by railway and automobile companies is growing and seems likely to be well maintained. Moreover, the "miscellaneous" demand is excellent, including steel for tractors, refrigerators, barrels, washing machines, electrical equipment, furniture and hardware. Particularly encouraging is the demand for manufacturers' wire.

Obviously, most of this (aside from railway steel) is relatively light, sheets being the chief item.

As to steel scrap, the reaction looks very much like a mere correction of an over-rapid speculative spurt and has gone nearly far enough.

* * *

I would say that the steel industry is in rather good condition and that no more than a dull or moderate dip—possibly of mere seasonal proportions—is now in prospect.

TAX Factors EYED

GOVERNMENT COSTS STUDIED

By MERRYLE STANLEY RUKEYSER
(Copyright, 1937, by Universal Service)

New York, May 7—The cost of government sounds abstruse and far away, but it absorbs funds of taxpaying business enterprises which otherwise would be available for higher wages, increased dividends, price reductions to customers, or corporate savings.

Take the North American Company, for example. In no twelve-month period in recent years has it earned as much per share on its common stock as it pays in taxes. In 1935 earnings were down to $1.01 and in the latest period [illegible] had recovered to $1.85.

It does seem that extravagant government [illegible] to raise the price of goods and services. Accordingly, when the public objects to high prices he should look to the men in his own eye.

J. P. Fogarty, president of the company, takes a philosophical view of [illegible] attacks on utilities, remarking:

"Attacks upon the public utility industry for many years from time to time from quarters where generalization often fails to distinguish between good and bad, but these attacks cannot seriously retard progress that is based on economic needs and sound and constructive policies."

This puts the responsibility up to private enterprise, to examine their objectives and [illegible] to live up to the [illegible] of business.

As a matter of fact [illegible] the end of [illegible] to [illegible] such as a co[illegible] Bureau of government [illegible] from [illegible] that drastic experiments may be on the wane.

LICENSING BOARD for the City of Boston. Application No. 1879. May 7, 1937.—Notice is hereby given, under Chapter 138 of the General Laws, that George H. Whitcher has applied for a license to sell alcoholic beverages of the following kind: All Alcoholic as a Tavern, at 1134 Washington Street and side entrance at 99 Dover street, in said Boston, to one room, first floor; entire for stock only of said building. DAVID T. MONTAGUE, EDWIN D. GALLAGHER, MARY E. DRISCOLL, Jr., Licensing Board.

2 Bids and Proposals

COMMONWEALTH OF MASSACHUSETTS Metropolitan District Commission, Parks Division. Notice of Contractors. Sealed proposals for constructing 4'-0" steel picket fence along the north side of Old Colony Parkway and 2'-0" steel fence around the Malibu Beach Bathhouse at Malibu Beach in the Dorchester District of Boston will be received at the office of the Metropolitan District Commission, 20 Somerset Street, Boston, until 1 p. m., Thursday, May 13, 1937. The wages paid to labor on this contract shall not be less than those prescribed by the Commissioner of Labor and Industries in accordance with Chapter 461, Mass. Acts of 1935, and set forth in a schedule of minimum wages in the contract. Proposals must be made upon the blank form furnished with the copy of the contract and specifications and each bid must be accompanied by a certified check for the sum of $1,000. Copies of the form of contract and specifications and plan can be obtained at the office of the Director of Parks Engineering, 20 Somerset Street, Boston. A deposit with the Treasurer of the MDC will be required for the plan and pamphlet and if the plan is returned in a good state the deposit or pamphlet are returned before the bids are opened. The deposit will be refunded otherwise it shall be forfeited. The Commission reserves the right to reject any or all proposals or to accept the proposal deemed best for the Commonwealth. WILLIAM A. WHITTAKER, Secretary.

Students Look Behind The Peace Strike

UNDER the leadership of the "United Student Peace Committee of the Emergency Peace Campaign," another of those "students peace strikes" was held a few days ago in schools and colleges throughout the country.

In numerous instances, the "strikers" for "peace" took the Oxford Oath pledging themselves "not to support the government of the United States in ANY WAR it may undertake."

This strike against loyalty DID NOT extend to the University of Pennsylvania.

Students in other schools, who were betrayed into joining the strike and NOW REGRET IT, should be vitally interested in knowing WHY Pennsylvania students kept out of it.

An editorial in the University's student-edited newspaper, The Daily Pennsylvanian, TELLS WHY.

They recognized the HAND OF COMMUNISM in the movement.

They were not willing to take part in a COMMUNIST PROJECT.

THE editorial shows how accurately the young people of this great American university penetrated into the RED BACKGROUND of a brazen subversionist invasion of school and campus.

Suggesting that American students who DID take part in it were "serving the Communist cause," the editorial said:

"For years the average American undergraduate has had Red propaganda poured into him in preparation for the fondest dream of the ardent Communist —world revoution!

"Red workers have infiltrated their ideals into the peace movement until today they control the direction of anti-war sentiment in America."

CALLING the combination of groups professing Christian ideals with Communist organizations a STRANGE PARADOX, the Pennsylvanian calls Christianity and Communism ARCH ENEMIES and says:

"These Christian groups are but the pawns of Red propaganda."

The editorial tells why the University of Pennsylvania would have nothing to do with the "Student Peace Strike."

"The United Student Peace Committee of the Emergency Peace Campaign lists as their FIRST organization the American League Against War and Fascism. This League is nothing more than a UNITED FRONT OF LEFT WING ORGANIZATIONS in America, including among its membership the Young Communist League and the Friends of the Soviet Union."

Also listed is the American Student Union, "a fusion of the National Student League, the Intercollegiate Communist Organization, and The League for Industrial Democracy, which was formerly the Intercollegiate Socialist Society."

ANOTHER in the list is the Fellowship of Reconciliation, "which recently issued a pamphlet contending that support of the Communist class war should be the proper attitude for a Christian."

Still another is the War Resisters' League, in whose statement of principles "class war is specifically exempted from the types of war to be resisted." The editorial concludes:

"Subtletries and insidious cleverness are the tools of the Communists.

"We are urged in the literature of the peace campaign to support the Oxford Pledge to never fight, and in the same breath are urged to support Spanish Democracy.

"Democracy? Ironical term. The official salute of the Spanish Loyalist is the raised fist, SYMBOL OF COMMUNISM.

"Pennsylvania was very wise to have no part in the nationwide strike AGAINST PEACE which we are told took place on many large campuses of America."

THE University of Pennsylvania was wise indeed, and fortunate in having this thorough analysis of the Communist campaign to promote WORLD REVOLUTION in the false disguise of a peace movement.

That the analysis has been made by a university publication, reflecting truly representative American youth opinion, is proof that Communism is MISSING ITS MARK.

New York Day by Day

By O. O. McIntyre

New York, May 7—Thoughts while strolling: Anagram for Bill Robinson or rather his nick-name Bojangles—Banjo Legs. Good idea of that Arizona editor. He wants to popularize Mmrs. for Mr. and Mrs. in society reporting. When a banquet begins to droop, they call on Bugs Baer. Et voila!

O. O. McIntyre

Dick Powell might be young Ted Roosevelt slightly shrunk. Howard Hughes could pass for Colonel Lindbergh in a dim light. Never knew a man named Fuller who wasn't a cut-up. The illustrators' Grand Old Man — Howard Chandler Christy.

A San Francisco drama critic sums up Elaine Barrie with: "She looks like Salome and acts like salami." Nobody can appear so flutteringly breathless as Ilka Chase. The town's richest producer—and one of the most successful—Dwight Deere Wiman. His latest is a hit.

Over-the-bump name: Benito Collazo, of El Chico. Wherever you see Helen Worden, the society scribbler, you see her mother. The most constant of the mother boys is Clifton Webb. Fifth avenue's never failing summer touch: The window boxes of flowers in the Helen Gould mansion.

Rhyme: Still a glib talker is Mayor Walker. Nearest to the late Bert Williams' sense of Negro comedy—that of Eddie Green. Not many actors have made the years pay dividends of youthful dividends as Bert Lytell. He could still be the flannel-mouthed lieutenant juvenile the old musical comedies.

Max Miller, in sending in a copy of his "Mexico Around Me," autographs it thus: "And maybe one of these days you, too, by working hard, may have this chance to go abroad."

Fred C. Kelly is among the increasing number of writers who have completely deserted the cities for the back country. For 30 years Kelly was a magazine writer, dividing his time between New York and Cleveland and for a several year period was a Washington political correspondent.

About nine years ago he decided he was fed up with the hurrahs and bought a farm near Peninsula, O., where he lives the year around, doing farm work most of the time, writing when he feels like it, and bounding off to Russia to view first-hand the progress of the Soviet.

It was Kelly who, riding in the subway toward Bowling Green one day, saw a passenger get on carrying a bright new axe. "Ah," beamed Kelly, "a woodsman from Brooklyn!"

Those several opulent windows along Fifth avenue with invisible glass influence, but few types interest me more than the international crook. I mean the suave, well-mannered and sympathetic cosmopolite who speaks many languages and is at home in any gathering.

I have met two at various times. One on an ocean liner who wore tweeds and full dress with equal je ne sais quoi. He met anyone on the boat he cared to meet without appearing officious. He was greeted at Southampton by two men from Scotland Yard who had been tipped by wireless.

And when he went down the gangplank in his first step toward entering Old Bailey he had an air—the dash that goes with worldliness. I read in a London paper he was an old offender and got an eight-year sentence.

The other roaming rascal was pointed out to me in the little room at Ciro's in Paris by Michael Arlen, who had used his counterpart in a short story in a British magazine. He was in immaculate white-tied elegance, dining alone with an alert, proud, piercing look. Every gesture bespoke culture and breeding.

Several weeks later I saw him sauntering along a promenade at Cannes at the cocktail hour. And when he sat down at a terrasse table I occupied one adjoining and tried to engage him in conversation by some casual observation about the weather. He replied with a grimace of a smile that wavered between politeness and haughtiness and then shook out his folded Paris Herald to indicate he cared for no further talk.

In a life of many rebukes I do not believe I ever felt quite so thoroughly squelched.

There is no place where the male feels so unspeakably silly as in a woman's hat shop. I was made especially conscious of this today when, just before entering a certain lady turned to me and said: "Get that smirk off your face."

Blindman's Buff

By Nelson Harding

Rendered sightless by that bandage,
This "blind" man persists in trying
To enumerate the people
Who are still out of employment.

Three or ten or seven millions?
Five or six or eight? He "guesses."
"Estimates" are only guesswork—
Why not see and count correctly?

The Japanese "Oracle"

The Human Side of the News

By Edwin C. Hill

While we Americans are debating the advisability of sending into oblivion our septuagenarian justices, the Japanese are doing all in their power to see that nothing happens to Prince Kimmochi Saionji, the oracle of Okitsu.

Edwin C. Hill

They wish him to continue despite his 87 years, to be the all-powerful adviser of the emperor and the person to whom all grave issues are submitted before any action is taken on behalf of the nation.

As a whole, the people want him to retain this extraordinary power, but it happens that some minority groups are opposed. A short time ago he was marked for assassination and was saved when 100 policemen with drawn revolvers stood guard about him in his villa. Now, his relatives, having decided he requires further protection, have purchased for him a bomb-proof automobile of American make for use in his trips between his seaside retreat and Tokyo.

Saionji is the sole survivor of a group of Japanese statesmen upon whom fell the burden of remodeling their feudal empire into a modern commercial state, Japan's position in world affairs today is the monument to the work they accomplished in a period of 50 years.

Saionji fought for the emperor in his youth, wearing green armor and leading the archers of the clans of Satsuma and Choshu. About the time that he and his followers were swinging double swords and stretching their bows on the fields of Japan, Grant and Lee were locked in the Battle of the Wilderness, pouring out shot and shell against each other. Both was the gap of ten centuries between the flowery kingdom and Western civilization.

TRAINED IN PARIS

However, there were other young men in Japan like Saionji, eager to discard the bow and arrow for the musket and cannon, eager to adopt the machines and the commercial methods of these strangers who had forced their way into the ports of Japan to open the country to the world.

Saionji, his military duties finished, was chosen to go and learn about the white races and their methods. Off to Paris he was packed by way of the United States, and he was to write from the Washington of 1871 that the low-necked dresses worn by the women were astonishing to him. The student from Japan was a curiosity to his fellows in Paris.

He found himself under the wing of a young radical named Georges Clemenceau, to whom everything in the world was wrong while the right answers were known only to himself.

Clemenceau so influenced Saionji that when the Japanese returned to Tokio he proved to be no help to the makers of the new state, rather he was their severe critic. Right off the bat he set up a newspaper and proceeded to make a new Japan in a day. The Emperor was prevailed upon to tear him down, and Saionji, quitting his pamphleteering, settled into orderly administrative work.

Reviewing his career, a Japanese writer of the present day says:

"His name was always mentioned as a warning against sending young people to Europe. Though he affects democratic manners, Prince Saionji cannot entirely forget his origin. He can talk with anybody but he does not talk with everybody. He seems to treat politicians much in the same way as he treats actors or geishas.

"He is more anxious to show his wisdom off by a hint or two than to get information from others. With a seemingly icy indifference to power, he is on the pinnacle of power. Therein lies the skill with which he conducts himself."

Saionji's actual position is that of adviser to the Emperor, particularly in political crises.

A MODERN "PROPHET"

To the Japanese, the Emperor is really God. Therefore, Saionji is his prophet. The Prince sees all, hears all and it is taken for granted that he knows all when a decision is to be made.

Analysis of this belief in the elder statesmen shows that it is not unreasonable. Even if Saionji does not know everything, he at least should know more about government than any of his countrymen.

He has lived and learned over a span of years during which Japan has moved out of antiquity to a modernity which at times is a bit too modern for some western nations.

Listen, World!

By Elsie Robinson

MOTHERHOOD IN 1937 — there, I suspect, is the toughest and trickiest job that human beings ever tackled.

Elsie Robinson

Myself—I've seen the old ways and the new, I started my mothering when the world was still run by HANDS... when they said "a young one is slack" if you hemmed your tablecloths by machine, or bought "canned goods" or "ready made" clothes or bakery bread. Having a baby was plenty of a job, then. Hard on the hands and feet—

But not, actually, as hard on the heart and brain.

Mothers worked longer hours when the century was new, did heavier labor, aged earlier as a consequence. But they had perquisites, privileges and power which few mothers ever have today.

A mother couldn't vote in 1904. But no king or war lord or genius rated higher on the social rolls. No matter how lazy or silly, selfish, fat-witted or dumb, woman became a SAINT with her baby's first wailing cry . . . A BABY WHOSE FACTS WERE NEVER QUESTIONED, WHOSE AUTHORITY WAS NEVER CHALLENGED, SAVE BY HER HUSBAND.

CUSTOMS CHANGE

A mother's word was literally law. In nine cases out of ten, she had neither education nor training to back that word. She was utterly without experience . . . had usually traveled but a few miles beyond her birthplace. And unless she had a hunger for wisdom within herself, she remained ignorant throughout her life—for society demanded no proof of her intelligence.

Yet, from the day she became a mother to the day of her death, her "mother instinct" was accorded the respect we now give Professor Einstein's latest findings.

But just try to get by on "mother instinct" in 1937—and see how far you'll go!

More changes have taken place in the realm of motherhood in the last 30 years than in the preceding 200. Mothers today must qualify as full-fledged citizens. If the individual mother can't make the grade, it's just her bad luck.

A BETTER DAY

A mother's word, today, carries only as much weight as the record which backs it. She receives respect only when and if she rates it. And she must work as hard to win and hold her authority as any other technician.

Foremost in the memories of my early motherhood is the picture of the Rocking Chair Brigade. Daily—the midday dishes having been washed — Mother changed from checked gingham to her black or gray taffeta "second best" dress with its white muslin apron.

Then, with a basket full of darning, she betook herself to the veranda and rocked the hours away.

Such a picture is unthinkable today. A gentle and lovely peace has gone from life with its passing, and yet—thank heaven it has gone! For the child of 1937 needs a mother who knows more of the world than lies within the railing of a veranda . . . a mother informed and flexible, competent and current, who can cope with a society which changes, literally, overnight.

Motherhood in the Machine Age! Take it from one who knows—the famous Light Brigade had nothing on the spunky youngster who tackles that job today!

Marry —Go— Round

By Helen Rowland

Many a man who is methodically attending to his daily business affairs, "heart whole and fancy free," is going to be married in June and is totally unconscious of the fact.

Man loves to dream of marriage in the abstract, just as he loves to loll back in an overstuffed chair, while his valet pours him a highball, and dream of roughing it on a north-woods fishing trip. But nobody—not even the man himself—knows what will wake him out of his dreams and make him DECIDE to marry.

There is an old joke which comes down from the Stone Age, about "the Time, the Place and the Girl." But the only occasion when a man considers the "time" is when he has a hunch that some other man may beat him to it. Then the words just pop out of his mouth.

The "girl" may have something to do with it. There are some girls who have a talent for making men propose to them. But, generally, the more anxious a girl is to get the matter settled, the longer it takes for the love-idea to penetrate a man's mind.

There is only one thing certain about a man. He WILL propose to SOMEBODY, somewhere sometime—when least expected. If he selects the right woman and attains a happy marriage, it will not be through the exercise of any intelligent discrimination on his part. It will be just sheer accident, fate, or good luck!

On the Nail

By Benjamin DeCasseres

With the granting of the final decree of divorce to Mrs. Simpson, the curtain rises on the second act of a story of love, royalty, politics and love that can only be told as it should be told by a future Shakespeare.

All of Shakespeare's historical plays have five acts.

What will be the nature of the second, third, fourth and fifth acts in the romantic story of the love of Edward the Eighth?

The Shakespeare of the future already has four characters for his historical drama—Edward, Mrs. Simpson, Premier Stanley Baldwin and the Archbishop of Canterbury.

When the play is completed in five acts by destiny and handed over to the unborn Shakespeare, what will the audiences of that future time say?—and what actor and actress, not yet born, will play Edward and Mrs. Simpson?

The greatest economic illusion of the times is the belief that Communism is anti-capitalistic.

On this subject no one has put the matter in fewer words than the noted constitutional lawyer, Edward A. Alexander, in an address before the City College Club. He said:

"COMMUNISM IS, IN REALITY, MORE CAPITALISTIC THAN A CONSTITUTIONAL DEMOCRACY, BECAUSE UNDER COMMUNISM A FEW POWERFUL POLITICIANS PRACTICALLY CONTROL, REGULATE AND DICTATE WHAT SHALL BE DONE WITH ALL OF THE CAPITAL."

Soviet Russia is the greatest historical example of a collectivist state, which, of course, requires THE GREATEST ARMY IN THE WORLD AND THE MOST BRUTAL SECRET POLICE OF ANY TIME to protect and retain what she has created and beaten out of her exploited working classes.

China is at her wits' end between the threats of Japan to eat her up piecemeal and Soviet Russia. The latter glares at her from the north through the door of Outer Mongolia, which, at the instigation of Moscow in 1924 established a semi-Communist republic.

China, however, is powerful in Inner Mongolia, a thin buffer state between outer Mongolia and China.

If ever China and Russia go to war Inner Mongolia will be the Belgium of the struggle.

So to keep the Inner Mongolians either pro-Red, high Chinese officials hurried the other day into Inner Mongolia to help the Mongolians celebrate the 775th birthday anniversary of Genghis Khan.

Genghis Khan (which means "perfect warrior") conquered half the world in the thirteenth century, his armies sweeping everything before him from the China Sea to the gates of the walls of Vienna. The conquering Mongols covered more ground than Napoleon.

Genghis was born with a blood clot in his hand. From the time he mounted the throne of the Mongol tribes that clot never left his hand.

It is also said that his horoscope when an infant foretold a bloody career, and, indeed, his career was the most horrifying in all history.

That the spirit of the symbol of the Four Horsemen of the Apocalypse still is present in the speeches of the Chinese and Mongolian "dignitaries" the other day. They called on the Chinese people to give them "another Genghis." The frightful "Devil Dances" were also performed in the streets of Kwesui.

There is a heady wine that does not come in bottles. It is this intoxicating month of May.

Those who have seen the great-est of French chanteuses, Yvette Guilbert, will recall her beautiful song, "The Merry Month of May," which she trilled while walking around the stage followed by children dressed in May-festival attire.

Take time off to enjoy the rebirth of nature. Open your eyes, your nostrils and your brain to that which may be free—the living garment and flame of life: Nature in her lovely rehearsal costumes for her annual play, "In the Good Old Summertime."

We are all soiled with too much indoors. Take a bath in the tub of outdoors. It's free and UNTAXED.

That's That

By Bruce Gustin

When the American people are told that centralization of unlimited authority in the Federal government will promote the welfare and prosperity of the workers, they have only to look at Germany to see what happens under such a system.

Last week Hitler reminded the German people how he had united labor and capital. He told them how he had ordered one of his lieutenants to "occupy the headquarters of the German labor unions and WIPE THEM OUT in order to create a new Socialist community in the sense of the Nazi spirit for German workers."

Under a dictatorship, a system of industrial slavery is substituted for industrial freedom.

Under Nazi rule, German workers are not supposed to know when they are entitled to higher wages. The government does all their thinking for them. Hitler has just told them the time for higher wages has not yet come in Germany. He says both workers and employers must increase production without increasing prices or wages.

Producing more without demanding higher wages, he claims, "will force better class respect for the worker." "Better class respect" is no substitute for an adequate wage when it comes to buying food, clothing and shelter.

Florida has one of the oldest. If not the oldest "old age pensioners" in the country. It is Mrs. Martha Weeks, familiarly known as "Grandma" Weeks, 109 years old. According to a certified copy of an old family Bible which has been filed in the county welfare office at Tampa, she was born in St. Augustine on August 4, 1827. Many cases of unusual longevity are reported but few are well authenticated.

Living 100 years is a remarkable achievement, even though the person who does it hasn't the slightest idea how it was done. According to insurance actuaries, not more than 30 people in a million live 100 years. And it is said there is no insurance of any person who had a life insurance policy who lived to be more than 106.

Women who smoke may point to "Grandma" Weeks as living evidence that the use of tobacco does not shorten human life. She says she has been smoking a corncob pipe—but not the same one—nearly 100 years. Few women who smoke want to smoke a pipe.

Of course, there is opposition to the proposal in Congress to cut all Federal appropriations 10 per cent. From the President of the National Federation of Federal Employes comes the complaint that such a policy would be "unsound, unfair and uneconomical."

There is something in his argument. It would be bad business to cut essential and unessential services alike. But every governmental department considers its activities essential and every government employe thinks that if there is any salary cutting it should be done on the other fellow.

Taxpayers are getting into the frame of mind where they don't care much where or how the slashing is done, provided governmental spending is materially reduced.

One thing certain, all the things for which the Federal Government is spending money are NOT essential. Back in 1932, Federal expenditures amounted to only a little over 4 and one-half billion dollars. This year they will exceed 8 and one-half billions. That enormous increase can't be explained by relief and more spending for national defense. Every department has contributed to it.

A Chicago "playboy" committed suicide by jumping from the 12th floor of the hotel in which he lived. Despondency due to brooding over the divorce of his second wife is believed to have been partly responsible for his act. A half-filled bottle of whiskey found near the window from which he fell probably figured in it, too. Booze and despondency make a suicidal combination.
